

Jozef Bátora

Jozef Bátora is Full Professor of International Relations at Webster Vienna Private University in Vienna and at the Department of Political Science, Comenius University in Bratislava. He holds a PhD in political science from the University of Oslo. His previous academic posts include positions as senior researcher at ARENA Centre for European Studies, University of Oslo, researcher at the Austrian Academy of Sciences in Vienna, and visiting scholar and visiting professor at Stanford University. His main research interests include processes of institutional change in international institutions, such as diplomacy and war, organisation theory, the development of the EU's political order and processes of identity formation in international relations. His work has been published in a number of peer-reviewed journals including Journal of European Public Policy, Journal of Common Market Studies, West European Politics, Cambridge Review of International Affairs, International Relations, Journal of International Relations and Development and Journal of European Integration. He has been principal investigator and national lead in a number of research projects funded by, for example, the Horizon 2020 program and the Slovak Research and Development Agency (APVV). His most recent book is Towards a Segmented European Political Order: The European Union's Post-Crisis Conundrum (London: Routledge, 2019) (with J.E. Fossum). Previously, he has served as editor-in-chief of Journal of International Relations and Development.